Propose Foster For Hall Of Fame

MAYO, Aug. 15 (PNS)—In a communication received from Senator Claude Pepper by the Mayo Press, in regard to its campaign to put Stephen Foster in the Hall of Fame, Senator Pepper was enthusiastic.

"I know of no man whom the American people," he wrote, "if they had the choice to make, would prefer to see in the Hall of Fame than Stephen Foster who has written the songs which have touched the hearts of the people of the nation—even the world. We of the South, particularly, would feel if Stephen Foster were in the Hall of Fame, that he represented the Spirit of the South, the deep, beautiful, moving sentiments which the South from time immemorial has contributed to the nation."

Interested southerners may do their share in electing Foster to the Hall of Fame, by writing to The Curator, Foster Hall Collection, University of Pittsburgh, Pa., for a list of the electors to the Hall of Fame.

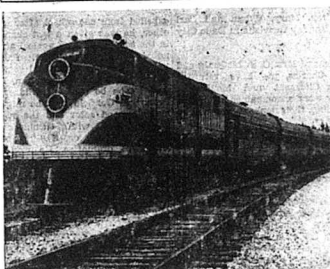

They are then urged to write all of as many as they feel able, and set forth their reasons for wanting Foster in the Hall of Fame.

Lakeland City Commissioners made $80,000 available last week to speed up work in connection with Lakeland's new Army Cadet Flying School at municipal airport. Training is scheduled to begin Sept. 15.

Southeast Florida again leads the state in hotel, apartment and restaurant construction, according to Hotel Commissioner W. M. Taylor. Permits for July in this area totaled $2,300,770.

It is really tough on the movies. Heroes pop up and are forgotten before the studio has a chance to film their story.

Atlantic Coast Line "Dieselizes" Florida Passenger Trains

Places Largest Order in History: Doubles Streamlined Train Equipment

WILMINGTON, N. C.—An order for 18 Diesel-Electric passenger locomotives, said to be the largest single order ever placed, was announced today by W. M. Davis, Executive Vice-President of Atlantic Coast Line Railroad.

At the same time Mr. Davis announced that an order had been placed for 21 lightweight, stainless-steel, streamlined coaches, by the Atlantic Coast Line and Pennsylvania Railroad, which will double the capacity of "The Champion," the New York-Florida streamliner operated by Coast Line in conjunction with Pennsylvania Railroad, Richmond, Fredericksburg, and Potomac Railroad, and Florida East Coast Railway. "The streamlined coach," said Mr. Davis, "is being built by the Edward G. Budd Manufacturing Company and will be ready for service early in the Florida season."

The new Diesel units will be built by Electro-Motive Corporation, subsidiary of General Motors. These units of 2000 horse power will be used to power two sections of the all-Pennsylvania "Florida Special," two sections of "The Champion," all-coach streamliners, and "The Viceroy," all-coach companion train of the "Champion." With this new power equipment it is expected that the fast running time between New York and Florida again will be shortened.

Although the increasing popularity of Florida as a vacation land was said to be chiefly responsible for these record-breaking orders, the growing industrial importance of the Southeastern states was said by Mr. Davis to have been also influential in expanding Coast Line's Diesel power, and streamlining equipment.

"The rapid gains in industry in the Southeastern states traversed by the Atlantic Coast Line," Mr. Davis said, "demand a corresponding increase in new and better train equipment. The manufacturing centers of the interior, made up of the South, are increasing their production, since America, because of the European war, is forced to supply its own markets, and we look confidently to the south in the near future."

Biting Proposes Plan For Assisting Migratory Labor

Appears Before Investigating Committee in Montgomery, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala., Aug. 15 (PNS)—Clarence R. Biting, President of the United States Sugar Corporation of Cleveland, appeared before the committee investigating interstate migration of destitute citizens, offered the following suggestions as helpful in solving the problems confronting our agricultural economy and aiding in reducing the misery of migratory, seasonal farm labor.

Biting stated that his suggestions were based on careful study of the problem, and that he had been in the spirit of a broad-mindedness that they would fit into and help in broader solutions and not interfere with any present or future plans for agricultural relief.

First: Encourage larger operating units. This may be accomplished individually, corporately, or cooperatively, by all three methods working in close harmony in each locality.

Second: Those larger operating units could cooperate with similar units in other parts of the country whose peak labor demands do not coincide. Such co-operation would tend to provide continuity of employment for seasonal labor requirements by definite and continuing groups of employers.

Third: These larger units, either individually or cooperatively, could afford to undertake private research, looking toward lengthening seasonal peak labor requirements; development of subsidiary crops to provide additional employment in slack seasons; development of new crops, the peak labor demand of which will fit into slack labor demands on existing crops; finding and encouraging rural location of small industrial plants which can absorb some labor during slack agricultural seasons; so as to increase profits and broaden markets; increasing the effectiveness of agricultural labor to the end that earnings of agricultural workers may be increased without increasing unit costs of production.

Biting said that Federal and state agencies could well afford to give realistic assistance to such a program. Continuing he said: "If encouragement, either tacit or otherwise, is to be given other countries to curtail their production and at the same time, we are prohibited from supplying our own needs in favor of the production of foreign goods, we are, the outlook for our people is dark, dull and dismal, as destitution is bound to increase. A realistic approach to our own problems, for the benefit of our people, means a future for our own country greater and better than anything ever witnessed in the world."

In closing, Biting called attention to what he termed a most glaring, unjust and unfair accusation made the South. He said: "For years the South has borne the cost of equipping her youth, only upon maturity to find them grabbed by the industrial, commercial and financial North and East. This condition has placed an unfair burden upon most Southern states. In addition it has prevented the South's utilizing the genius, ability and capability which she has cradled and fostered. The South has the most abundant supply of two of the three essentials for plentiful life: rainfall and sunshine. She has an adequacy of the third essential: soil. Every agency but nature has apparently combined to use the resources and capabilities of the South. We, in the Everglades, have shown that the highest standards of living in agriculture can be maintained in the South. We are sure that some condition can be proved in industry. We are satisfied that since equality with the rest of the nation can be obtained, the South will force rapidly ahead. Most emphatically the South is not a problem, economically or otherwise, to the nation, unless such problem be to find ways and means of continuing her subjection."

When that Chicago judge ruled that a man may slap his wife, the women were more convinced they should fight for equal rights.

THOUGHTS ON THE LIFE AND DEATH OF WILL ROGERS

(Note on August 15th, 1925, Will Rogers died in an airplane crash in the black wilderness beyond Point Barrow, Alaska. He was the most beloved American citizen. His tragic death brought unspeakable sorrow not only to millions of Americans but also to countless citizens of other lands.)

In memory of this great and good man, and in recent observance of the fifth anniversary of his untimely death, I am offering a little tribute I wrote the Sunday after he was killed on Thursday, August 15th, 1925. It is too long to be used in one column, so I am using part of it this week, and the remainder next week.

"I am one among the thousands who loved him and I stand with the millions who lament his death. These tender and beautiful words, spoken of Henry W. Grady by John Temple Graves on December 22nd, 1889, express my feelings about the tragic death of Will Rogers.

"I know full well that the only man who could fittingly epitomize the most universally beloved person in all the world was taken from us last Thursday night when death claimed Will Rogers for his own in the frozen wastes of Alaska. So I shall make no attempt to write the eulogy that he so richly deserves. I shall only try to set down some of the thoughts that have filled my mind since the sad news of his tragic death reached us last Friday morning.

Will Rogers has been my hero since I met him for the first time in Ocala, Florida, on a winter night back in 1928. He was delivering one of his humorous lectures there, and several of the fellows from the University of Florida drove down to hear him. After the lecture we hung around the stage door to try to get a word with him, and he shook his hand if he would let us. When he came out the door and saw us shivering there in the cold, waiting to get a look at him, he walked right up and shook hands with us and then invited us to go to a restaurant and have a bowl of soup on him.

While we were putting the soup away he talked to us just as pleasantly and agreeably as if we had been persons of some importance. We asked him to come up to the University the next day and make a talk but he declined the invitation. We later learned that he stopped by the Veterans' Hospital in Lake City on his way north the next day and made one of his cheerful and humorous talks to the crippled soldiers there. Since that night he has been the greatest man in the world to me.

Later, that year at the Democratic Convention in Houston, I saw and heard him again. He attracted more attention there than any of the candidates for President. He walked to and from the convention hall to his hotel. I usually follow a few steps behind him just to look at him and listen to the witty conversation that he carried on with those who were privileged to be in his company. As the convention was about to adjourn and some of the delegates were actually leaving, Will Rogers was called to the rostrum for a farewell speech. Among the other witty remarks he said: "Well, rain falls, the Democratic Convention is now adjourning, and the delegates are standing out of the convention hall over the empty bottles." That, as you recall, was luck in the dreary days of prohibition.

I next saw him in 1932 when he made the oft-quoted crack about Mayor Alton being stopped from talking by a barber while shaving with soap suds and placing a razor to his throat. When Mayor Alton and Will Rogers finished their shave the Mayor jerked out a dollar bill and started to pay for Rogers' shave. Rogers objected and paid the barber a dollar from his own pocket, remarking that he knew if he permitted the Mayor to pay for his shave, he would pass the cost on down to the people in some form of taxation.

On this same occasion a lady from St. Augustine rushed up to him in the hotel lobby and invited Rogers to come to the 40th birthday anniversary of that City, then being celebrated. He told her he would come if she would promise to come to his 40th birthday anniversary celebration.

On this same occasion he posed for some pictures with Mayor Alton and J. P. Inglis, Jr. and the Community Chest campaign, then in progress. They started to pose with their hats on, but Inglis noticed that both Alton and Inglis were just about bare of any hair, and being himself, possessed of a head full of hair, he insisted that the pictures be taken of the three with their hats off.

I believe it is no exaggeration to say that he influenced the thoughts and opinions of more people in this country than any other person who has ever lived. Certainly he was the most quoted man in America. Hardly a week passed that he was not quoted in the debates in both branches of Congress. I believe an examination of the Congressional Record will show that Rogers was quoted or referred to by Senators and Representatives more often than any private citizen of the United States. He was generally credited with influencing the Senate to reject the World Court.

When anyone introduced a resolution about national affairs, Will Rogers' opinion was usually mentioned before the discussion was finished. In fact, his opinion on national questions were about the only opinions that many people whether it be on stage or screen. It was the theatre that gave him a new lease on living. When a boy, John was a misfit and a roughneck having been brought up in one of the toughest neighborhoods in New York. After being expelled from one school after another, he was given a last chance in the school run by Angelo Patri, noted child psychologist. Patri knew if this boy could find something that would interest him, he would soon be over his wildness. Patri told Garfield that he might make a good actor and the suggestion went with enthusiasm. From that time on, Garfield ate and slept dramas. He won a scholarship at the Hotchkiss Foundation and from there he joined the Eve Le Gallienne Repertory Theatre as an apprentice.

Intangibles Must Meet Tax Payment

TALLAHASSEE, Aug. 15.—(AP)—Information on intangible property obtained from reports made by Florida corporations to the Federal government in income tax returns will be made available to county tax assessors at a monthly cost for that in past years, W. M. Wainwright, State Auditor, announced last week.

Auditor Wainwright has had a force of men working on income tax returns in Jacksonville for some time under his supervision. The work has been speeded up by the adoption of a simplified form which makes the work much less complicated and enables him to transmit the information to the county tax assessors at an earlier date.

Present indications are that the state returns from intangible taxes will exceed one and one-half million dollars this year, he said. This will represent the largest amount had been instructed by Governor Cone to see that every Florida resident paid his just and equitable share of intangible taxes and that they knew that some owners of large intangible properties were filing income tax returns in other states in order to escape the strict enforcement of intangible tax collection started by Governor Cone when he went into office.

The strict enforcement of the collection of intangible taxes, with the resulting increase in state revenue, has enabled the state to carry on without the imposition of new taxes, Wainwright said, but this increase would not have been possible if Governor Cone had not obtained the consent of the Federal government for his office to examine income tax returns when he began his enforcement drive three years ago.
